CAMPION HALL
UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

Campion Hall Academic Subjects

The life of the Hall is dominated by an intellectual commitment to the humanum, that is, to propelling everything that might help human beings and humanity as such to flourish in the future.

Those disciplines currently taught and researched in the University that may strengthen the humanum include:

Archaeology and Anthropology

Biodiversity, Conservation, and Management

Comparative Philology and General Linguistics

Comparative Religion

Development Studies

Economics for Development

Geography and the Environment

Greek and Latin Languages and Literature

History

History of Art and Visual Culture

International Development

Judaism and Christianity in the Graeco-Roman World

Linguistics, Philology, and Phonetics

Oriental Studies

Philosophy

Philosophical Theology

Politics and International Relations

Refugee and Forced Migration Studies

Social Policy and Intervention

Sociology

Theology and Religion

Water Science Policy and Management

This list is not exhaustive and we are willing consider postgraduate applications from any of the four divisions of the University.